The revenue increased by approximately HK$35,739,000 as compared with that of corresponding period last year. The increase in revenue was mainly attributable to the fact that, in previous year, the Group provided to its existing customers with free upgrade and transformation of the geothermal energy collection equipment in order to meet the new standards of "The Technical Code for Single Well Circulation Heat Exchange Geothermal Energy Collection Well" which received good response and increased customers' loyalty to the enterprise. Hence, the Group secured a number of projects. The Group's gross profit margin decreased from 43.0% in last corresponding period to 38.1% in the current period, which was mainly due to the decrease in projects with higher profit margin.

Other income decreased from approximately HK$51,450,000 in the corresponding period last year to approximately HK$17,421,000 for the six months ended 30 June 2015. BUSINESS REVIEW AND PROSPECTS

Ever Source Science and Technology Development Group Co., Ltd. (“HYY Group”), the Company’s subsidiary, has been devoted to research, development and marketing of shallow ground source energy¹ used as the substitute energy in providing heating for buildings. By now, its original technology, i.e., the single well ground source energy collection technology has been fully commercialized. As a scientific result contributing to ecological construction, the technology helps to realize holistic escalation of the traditional heating industry that relies on fossil energy burning and lead to fast development of a newly emerging industry of integrated heating and cooling with ground source energy, which features intelligent heating (cooling) for buildings free of combustion.

Key characteristics of intelligent heating (cooling) with ground source energy:

1. Locally available renewable energy supported by advanced technology products to achieve integrated heating and cooling provision for buildings.
2. Free of combustion and pollution in the operating and service areas.
3. No additional cost is added onto the total building cost for achieving the same level of comforts.
4. Realizing high energy efficiency in electricity utilization as it uses a small amount of electricity to transfer a large amount of free and renewable ground source energy to produce heating/cooling for buildings.
5. Providing secured comfort for residences in buildings at low cost, low energy consumption, high energy efficiency, zero pollution and therefore low fossil energy dependency.

The Company has been making constant efforts in promoting orderly and standardized development of the ground source energy heating industry in China. As a result, the China New Energy Building Industry Association was set up in Beijing on 16 April 2015 and the HYY Group holds one of the Vice Presidency in the Association. The Association will engage with relevant enterprises and agencies in new energy and building sectors, so as to jointly explore the best route and modality in the “new normal” backdrop for effective combined development of the two sectors. On 28 May 2015, the HYY Group, in the name of the Vice Presidency of the China New Energy Building Industry Association held the “Workshop on Shallow-Ground Energy and New Energy Building Development”. Present to the workshop, there were experts and leaders in these fields including Mr. Wang Bingchen, Senior Counselor of the State Council and Mr. Wu Dsheng, expert in HAVC sector. In the workshop, substantial discussions were carried out on the current status, problems and possible solutions on the development of the newly emerged intelligent heating industry to provide combustion-free heating with shallow ground source energy to buildings. Moreover, together with the workshop, some field visits were organized to the sites of shallow ground source energy central heating project of over 100,000 sq.m. including the office buildings of the China Telecom and the CHALCO.

In the Review Period, the Group has been making forceful efforts to develop the industry of integrated heating and cooling with ground source energy. In the industrial base set up by the Group in Dalian where winter heating is mandatory in China, the construction of a demonstration and show center along Dalian Xianyu Valley has completed with a floorage of 25,000 sq.m. The center will enter into operation as the Caribbean Holiday Resort Hotel in North China on August 16th this year to showcase practical application of renewable ground source energy, being entrusted to BTG-Jianguo Group for management. In the center, the Ground Source Energy Heat Pump Environmental System is used to provide central heating and cooling for the water culture center; ground energy heating device is installed to provide independent heating and cooling for each villa (app. 200 sq.m. each); and ground source energy water heater is used to provide domestic hot water for buildings. As such, both tourist and visitors in this profession can try out the effects by themselves.

Moreover, the Dalian Ground Source Energy Heating Co. Ltd. is now engaged in the construction and operation of a 900MW Distributive HYH Ground Source Heating and Cooling Station in the international business district of Xiaojiaowan in Dalian, it is estimated that within the upcoming ten years, the Company's industrial base will produce heating and cooling for building area of 15 million sq.m. covering a region of 20.4 km² in Dalian. The base will become a national base that manifests all-round commercialization and industrialization of the ground source energy combustion-free heating technology and products. It showcases that as the primary substitute energy for building heating, ground source energy can substitute conventional fossil energy with the readiness of various ground source energy heating products developed by the Group to replace conventional heating methods such as urban heating network, regional heating boilers, and self-combustion burning in rural households.

- i. Renewable Shallow Ground Source Energy
Renewable shallow ground source energy refers to the low-grade energy of 0-25°C, reserved in waters such as rivers, lakes, ocean, underground water, mid water and sewage water, and in land such as rocks and soils etc.. Its reserve is huge and wide spreading. Compared with solar and wind energies, the renewable shallow ground source energy has the most extensive distribution. The shallow ground surface of the earth is the primary receiver and storage of solar energy and therefore the shallow ground source energy reserve is more than enormous within 100 meters under the ground surface. Based on our statistics, the reserve is over 1,000 times more than what is needed currently by heating for the 50 billion m² building areas in China.*
- ii. Conventional Geothermal Energy
Conventional geothermal energy is a high-grade energy of over 25°C. As regulated by the National Law on Mineral Resources, the geothermal energy is a kind of mineral resource owned by the State. It can be directly used for power generation, building heating and water heating. However, since it relies on water that regains heat in great depth underground, its renewable cycle is long. After heat is extracted, the geothermal water is hard to be re-injected into the underground and easy to cause pollutions to the water system, posing threat to water quality of our future generations. Moreover, utilization of geothermal energy is always highly difficult in project engineering and high in maintenance cost. Being unevenly distributed mostly in seismically active zones, geothermal utilization facilities are often endangered and therefore unreliable.*
